Communications Intern

Buy Brightline is a grassroots campaign pushing the State of Florida to buy Brightline, a private train that runs from Orlando to Miami. Brightline's Florida operation is over $2 billion in debt and heading towards bankruptcy - like its parent company, which filed for bankruptcy in September. We want our lawmakers to use our tax dollars to buy Brightline and make it public - we deserve public transit and voted for it over 20 years ago.

We're looking for a Communications Intern to support our campaign. You'll edit and write copy for our social media posts, newsletter, policy briefs, and other written materials to support our campaign.

This is an unpaid, 3-month internship with flexible hours, ideal for a student or early-career professional looking to build experience in research, public policy, and government relations. The campaign intends to pursue fundraising to support compensation for the position based on performance and funding availability, though future compensation is not guaranteed.

What you'll do:

- Research, expand, and update directory of media contacts
- Draft media releases, columns, newsletter articles, and other documents
- Edit policy briefs, legislative memos, and talking points

What we're looking for:

- Strong organizational and writing skills
- Ability complete projects timely
- Self-starter who can work independently with minimal supervision
- Eagerness to learn and grow with the campaign

Come help us build the case for public ownership of transit!
